What is Stella (ALPHA)?

Stella (ALPHA) is a leveraged strategies protocol with 0% cost to borrow. At Stella, borrowers (or 'leveragoors') can take leverage on supported DeFi strategies without paying any borrowing cost. Lenders can earn real yield shared from the leveragoors as a lending APY, the more the leveragoors get, the more the lenders earn. This is made possible by Stella's 'Pay-As-You-Earn' (PAYE) model, designed to help leveragoors and lenders earn the highest yield potential.

As the leveraged strategies protocol without the Interest Rate Model (IRM) or borrowing interest, Stella works under the Pay-As-You-Earn Model (PAYE) which focuses on the yield sharing between Lenders and Leveragoors.

Leveragoors can access multiple selections of leveraged strategies built on top of various defi protocols. Instead of paying a borrow interest quoted from the lending side to levered up the position, the leveragoors just have to share the yield they earn when closing the position which means No gain = No pay.

Lenders can lend assets to the lending pools on Stella and earn real yields. Yields generated from Stella Strategy are shared to lenders. Given that the lending APY is the yield shared from leveragoors, there is no maximum cap on the lending APY.

ALPHA is the native token that Powers the Stella protocol, a leveraged on-chain strategies protocol with 0% cost to borrow. 20% of the yields cut from leveragoors are collected as Stella protocol fees.
