If you're looking for the Amazon stock price prediction and want to know what the price of Amazon stock will be in 2023, 2025 and beyond, you're in the right place. In this article, we will dive into the Amazon stock forecast for both short term and long term.

In 2022, the Amazon stock price was slashed in half amid risk-off sentiment and fears of a global recession.

Rumours of massive layoffs taking place at the e-commerce giant have materialised as the retail giant's CEO, Andy Jassy, confirmed that the company plans to let go more than 18,000 employees, the biggest reduction in Amazon's workforce in its history.

Is this a signal that Amazon expects to take a stronger hit as the global recession unfolds, or are the layoffs simply a necessary step to stimulate business performance? Here we take a look at Amazon stock forecast and news driving the AMZN stock price.

A brief glance at Amazon

The company was founded in 1994 by entrepreneur Jeff Bezos. He recognised the e-commerce potential of the fast-growing internet.

Amazon was originally an online bookselling platform - being able to list all titles online gave the company an advantage over in-person booksellers who had to print long and expensive paper catalogues. In its early years, Amazon famously operated out of Bezos's garage in Bellevue, Washington.

The firm officially debuted in October 1995, and in two months was earning $20,000 a week in sales. On 15 May 1997, the company went public at $18 a share, listing on the Nasdaq.

However, it would be several years before Amazon would turn a profit. In the fourth quarter of 2001 - amid the bursting of the dot com bubble that saw the destruction of many e-commerce companies - Amazon posted a profit of $5m.

The company would continue innovating over the following years, launching products and services, including two-day membership delivery Amazon Prime in 2005, electronic reading device Amazon Kindle in 2007, and electronic voice assistant Echo & Alexa in 2016.

Amazon also branched out into music and film with Amazon Music and Amazon Instant Video.

How is Amazon stock traded in 2022?

Amazon stock is currently trading at the levels not seen since the March 2020 market turmoil. The stock has enjoyed a bull run in 2021, reaching a record $188.65 intraday high on 13 July.

2022, however, has painted a different picture, with the war in Ukraine, soaring inflation and aggressive monetary tightening seeing AMZN stock losing 50% in the year.

Amazon reported the third quarter of 2022 results on 28 October. Net sales increased 15% to $127.1bn, compared to $110.8bn year-on-year. Excluding the $5.0bn of the unfavourable foreign exchange rate impact, net sales increased 19% compared to a year ago.

Operating income fell to $2.5bn from $4.9bn, while net income decreased to $2.9bn, or $0.28 per diluted share, compared to $3.2bn, or $0.31 per diluted share.

Third quarter 2022 net income included a pre-tax valuation gain of $1.1bn included in non-operating income from the investment in Rivian Automotive.

Amazon stock forecast amid massive layoffs

In the press release confirming Amazon's plan to lay off 18,000 employees, Jassy encouraged investors:

"These changes will help us pursue our long-term opportunities with a stronger cost structure; however, I'm also optimistic that we'll be inventive, resourceful, and scrappy in this time when we're not hiring expansively and eliminating some roles."

Market participants reacted negatively to the announcement, with the AMZN stock price falling 2.37% on the day.

AJ Bell investment director Russ Mould said in a note shared with Capital.com that even though the workforce reduction is the biggest in history, it becomes a "drop in the ocean" when viewed in the context of the 1.5 million total Amazon employees. He added:

“It’s also important to consider where the cuts are being made. They are mostly in areas like human resources as well as its Amazon Go and Amazon Fresh physical stores, and the latter represent something of an experiment for the company.”

Mould pointed out that the retail giant is likely to focus on its core e-commerce and Amazon Web Services cloud operations, noting that the announcement will be viewed positively by the shareholders as it signals higher returns.

“Still, these job cuts represent a significant increase on previously outlined levels. It shows Amazon is taking the current economic challenges seriously. As is often the case, the news was pleasing to shareholders who will prize any efficiencies which can increase their slice of the returns generated by the business.”

Amazon stock price prediction: US recession fears hurt the stock

In late April 2022, Amazon’s stock fell 14% on the day the company released its financial results for the first quarter of 2022. Back then, the company reported a $3.8bn net loss due to a $7.6bn markdown of its investment in Rivian (RIVN), the electric vehicle startup in which the company has a large stake.

The stock price has not recovered with the US Federal Reserve (Fed) bringing interest rates to 4.25%-4.5% at the December meeting. The aggressive monetary tightening coupled with the war in Ukraine has turned global investor sentiment sour, raising concerns about the US recession.

Amazon is a large e-commerce business with revenues primarily coming from its North American business. The performance of the US economy is highly relevant to determine how the company will perform financially in the future.

“Powell remained adamant, as we have noted, that he expects to maintain a significantly restrictive policy stance until incoming data support a high degree of confidence that inflation will fall to 2% on a sustained basis”, analysts from S&P Global commented in a December note.

“Indeed, not a single FOMC participant expects to start cutting interest rates before 2024, in contrast to investor expectations that rate cuts could begin as early as next September.”

Meanwhile, around 30% of the global economy could be poised to enter a recession according to the International Monetary Fund (IMF), while the largest three economies in the world - the US, China, and the European Union - will be growing at a slower rate compared to 2022.
