What is Astar (ASTR)?

The multichain Polkadot dApp hub, Astar Network, previously known as the Plasm Network, serves as the connection point between Polkadot and many Layer 1 blockchains. Building the best multichain smart contract hub that supports Defi, NFTs, and DAOs seems to be the project's goal. With 150K+ ETH in combined worth locked (TVL) through lock drops, 30K community members, and over 40 ecosystem initiatives connected to the network, Astar Network is well on its way to achieving that goal.

The token's main goal was to create a Layer 2 scaling solution for Polkadot, which it accomplished and has since continued to build upon. In addition, Web 3.0 developers utilize Astar as an innovative contract platform because it is compatible with the Ethereum Virtual Machine and WebAssembly (WASM).

Astar Network offers the means for creating scalable dApps and enabling cutting-edge layer two solutions. Because of its design, the Polkadot Relaychain does not allow smart contracts. On the Astar Network, developers are free to create any app they want without worrying about scalability.
