What is Babylon?

Babylon is a Proof-of-Stake (PoS) blockchain platform built using the Cosmos SDK. It is a groundbreaking project that utilizes Bitcoin (BTC) as stake to enhance the security of other PoS chains.

While Proof-of-Work (PoW) blockchains rely on computational power to secure the network, PoS blockchains depend on the amount of stake to maintain network security. However, next-generation PoS blockchains often face challenges during the launch phase, where individuals or organizations can acquire large amounts of stake, gaining control over the system. This can either lead to centralization or force the system to offer high returns to attract operators, resulting in rapid inflation.

Babylon addresses these challenges by leveraging the security power of Bitcoin to reinforce the safety of PoS chains. This approach not only protects PoS networks but also offers a new revenue stream for Bitcoin holders, aligning the interests of both Bitcoin and PoS blockchain ecosystems.

At the heart of Babylon lies a transformative concept—Bitcoin staking. This mechanism enables Bitcoin holders to put their idle BTC to work by staking it to bolster the security of proof-of-stake

(PoS) blockchains, while simultaneously earning yield. The result is a two-sided marketplace: PoS chains in need of additional security can offer rewards, and Bitcoin holders can supply capital in exchange for yield.

What sets Babylon apart from traditional staking models is that it eliminates the need to bridge BTC to other chains or rely on centralized custodians. Instead, Babylon introduces a secure and decentralized protocol that allows users to stake their Bitcoin trustlessly, without giving up custody. At the same time, it provides full slashable security guarantees to PoS chains—ensuring accountability and reinforcing network integrity.
