What is Balancer?

Balancer (BAL) is an Ethereum token that powers the Balancer Protocol. The Balancer Protocol on its part is an automated market maker (AMM) that allows users to create or add liquidity to trading pools and earn from that. Any interested person can become a Balancer User. As the first sentence here hinted, the Balancer Protocol was built on the Ethereum blockchain, and BAL is the utility token.

Balancer may not be the first or most popular automated market maker, but it offers users certain unique features that make it an interesting DeFi tool. It can serve users in different interesting ways – it is a liquidity provider, it is a price sensor, and it is a self-balancing weighted portfolio. Users can earn passive income through the BAL token when they contribute to the various customizable liquidity pools in Balancer. It operates three major types of pools, namely private pools, shared pools, and smart pools.

As a unique protocol, Balancer introduces a few new features to the DeFi space. Though it is similar to Uniswap and Curve in many ways, it is the first self-balancing weighted portfolio. Tokens are always equally weighted, regardless of price change, thanks to the self-adjusting nature of the pool. Balancer is also the first AMM to allow liquidity providers to have up to eight assets per market.

The customizable nature of the pools makes Balancer attractive. Users can add more than one token, and it is not compulsory to have ETH. When many DeFi traders learn about the benefits of using Balancer, the adoption rate will improve, and that can make BAL explode in the future.

Current Balancer Price

At the time of writing, Balancer is trading at $4.63 with a market capitalization of $194,566,937 , ranking #121 amongst all cryptocurrencies by that metric. In the past 24 hours, the BAL coin price has decreased by 2.59% with a trading volume of $4,109,599.

Now let's move on to the BAL coin price prediction for 2023 and beyond.

Should You Consider Investing in Balancer (BAL)?

From what we have covered so far, you can tell that Balancer is a unique Ethereum-based protocol that can be very useful for DeFi participants. It offers several helpful perks to users and rewards them for contributing to customizable liquidity pools. By all standards, it is an above-average automated market maker. But does that mean you should invest in BAL coin?

The BAL token is both the utility and governance token of the Balancer protocol. As such, it is expected to gain value as the protocol improves and become more popular. However, it has been shown in the past that the coin can be extremely volatile.

From our Balancer crypto price predictions and forecasts, you can tell that the coin is not going to grow at a fast pace. Rather, it will likely grow slowly over the next seven years. It is a suitable investment vehicle for patient investors who are ready to endure losses, should the bearish market continue for long. BAL's price history inspires little confidence. If you don't have the stomach for high-risk cryptocurrencies, this may not be the best coin for you.
