Mask Network, Explained

Using a decentralized system, Mask Network enables users to send and receive encrypted communications on social media platforms like Facebook (NASDAQ:FB) and Twitter (NYSE: TWTR). It connects the online world with the social media sphere.

After its release in July 2019, its first practical application was to facilitate the exchange of encrypted messages between Twitter and Facebook users. Two years later, in February 2021, it raised another $3 million to further develop its ecosystem, having already raised $2 million in November 2020.

At the moment, Mask Network members can also run Gitcoin grant campaigns straight from their Twitter accounts.

P2P payment and storage services are planned for the future of the protocol.

Is it a good time to buy MASK token?

One possible bullish cryptocurrency to consider is MASK. However, with many external factors impacting the crypto market currently at play, it may be unwise to engage in the cryptocurrency
