What is ICON?

ICON Network is a L1 blockchain with a focus on scalable and secure multi-chain bridging. It acts as a hub connecting partner blockchains through the Blockchain Transmission Protocol (BTP), enabling cross-chain token swaps and smart contract calls. The ICON ecosystem includes prominent blockchains like Binance Smart Chain, Near, Harmony, and Ethereum, fostering a thriving ecosystem of dApps, including DeFi protocols, NFT platforms, games, and more.

ICX serves as the native cryptocurrency on the ICON Network, facilitating essential economic transactions within the network. It functions as a medium of exchange for users engaging in various activities. ICX can be exchanged through three methods: "Minting," "Staking," and "Transferring." The value of ICX is closely tied to the computational power available on the ICON Network, influencing its price.

The ICON ecosystem aims to build a decentralized network allowing independent blockchains to transact with each other without the need of any intermediate third parties. Through its Blockchain Transmission Protocol (BTP), ICON aimed to target this, offering its interoperability as its core feature. It allows protocols to communicate with one another while providing services like smart contracts and value transfer.

What makes the ICON different is that many functions that take place within this ecosystem must transact using only its native ICX cryptocurrency. The team is aggressively pushing itself to create the largest decentralized network the world has ever known.
