What is TrueFi (TRU) ?

Unsecured loans are made available to users of the decentralized TrueFi (TRU) system. Peer-to-peer lending does not use an outside agency to disperse loans; rather, it uses its own credit scores to vet prospective borrowers.

Over-collateralized lending is key to DeFi's success since it restricts users from withdrawing funds if another user has borrowed assets and hasn't repaid them as promised under the lending protocol. Decentralized finance (DeFi) relies on an open and honest assessment of borrower trustworthiness for its lending platform to survive. According to the litepaper, TrueFi (TRU) hopes to start making unsecured loans to DeFi.

The platform's stated mission is to connect cryptocurrency lenders with dependable borrowers in need of working capital optimization while giving an attractive, long-term rate of return for those willing to invest in cryptocurrencies. With time, TrueFi (TRU) aspires to build a fully automated, market-based credit rating and lending mechanism. The platform is working toward a more progressive decentralized structure. Those who support progressive decentralization argue that the change to decentralization should be gradual rather than abrupt.
