What is Waves?

Waves is a proof-of-stake blockchain designed to enable users to create and launch custom crypto tokens without the need for extensive complex blockchain coding. Rather, tokens can be created and managed via scripts that run in user accounts on the Waves blockchain.

Waves' scalability enables rapid development at a minimal cost, which is among its key features. It allows users to launch ICOs to fundraise projects from all across the world in a short span, helping startup founders speed things up and shapes the future of community-supported endeavors.

Waves aim to bring to its users the functionalities galore of decentralized finance (DeFi) and, simultaneously, make the users harvest the benefits by taking advantage of a user-friendly interface. Apart from being one of the most ambitious projects based on multi-chain infrastructure and a competitor of Ethereum, Waves also provides its customers with multiple solutions by integrating various blockchains on one unified platform.

Popular DeFi platforms built on the Waves blockchain include the Neutrino stablecoin, the swop.fi automated money maker and Waves' own decentralized exchange. NFT games and marketplaces also feature on the protocol list.

In addition, Waves' own exchange supports user-generated liquidity pools, where users can earn up to 4% annual percentage yield rewards for contributing to the pools.

The native cryptocurrency, WAVES, underpins the platform. It is used to pay fees and, support the network, and more importantly, to secure the network through staking.

As one of the initial coins in its era, Waves tech is voyaging to enhance blockchain early products and platforms. The endeavor has already progressed beyond its primary purpose of offering faster, higher data rates than some of the prominent projects. Waves has already made significant achievements including a TVL of over $1 billion, with over 2 million user wallets.

Waves announced that it would be upgrading to Waves 2.0 before long, and has made significant progress so far. The move will expand the utility of the blockchain platform and switch its consensus mechanism from PoS (Proof-of-Stake) to PPOSS (Practical Proof-of-Stake Sharding) that is compatible with Ethereum Virtual Machine. This will enable Ethereum-based protocols to migrate to Waves more easily.

DWF Labs commits 500k WAVES to WavesDAO, sending Waves prices soaring

On June 22, DWF Labs, the global digital asset market maker and web3 investment firm, announced its support for the launch of WavesDAO by committing 500K WAVES to Waves staking and voting to support the WavesDAO project.

This contribution enhances community decision-making capabilities and propels the growth of WavesDAO as the first DAO on the Power Protocol platform. It will also go a long way in empowering developers to build on the Waves Blockchain.

WAVES price hit a daily high of $2.82 on June 24 after a 91.23% price surge in 24 hours. While the surge caught most investors by surprise, the price movement was coming seeing the commitment DWF labs had shown to the WavesDAO project.

WavesDAO Explained

WavesDAO is a pioneering For-Profit DAO on the Power Protocol platform aimed to support the development of Waves Blockchain-based projects and other initiatives. It will be managed by $PWR token stakers, which makes it an investment vehicle for the community.

Essentially, a governor is expected to have a minimum of 1 PWR to participate in the DAO and 100 PWR staked for the initiation of a proposal to succeed.

At the moment, WavesDAO is seeking to channel a third of Waves miners' rewards into the Waves DAO. However, this proposal needs to be approved by Waves miners and stakers through on-chain voting.

Overall, WavesDAO provides community members with a platform to

- propose projects
- evaluate investment opportunities
- and collectively decide on the allocation of funds.

Waves Price History

Now let's take a quick look at the Waves price history. While past performance should never be taken as an indicator of future results, knowing what the crypto has done in the past can give us some much-needed context when it comes to either making or interpreting a Waves crypto price prediction.

Waves first came onto the open market in June 2016 at $1.33 and climbed to $18.07 when crypto markets rallied in December 2017. The price then fell to $6.68 in the January 2018 sell-off and briefly moved below $1 towards the end of the year.

Waves traded between $0.50 and $4 until November 2020, when the price began to climb along with other cryptocurrencies, led by Bitcoin. The price soared to $41.33 on 4 May 2021 due to the market rally but kept fluctuating since then. Though achieving some highs in September and October, Waves finally closed 2021 at $14.56.

Waves enjoyed impressive gains in Q1 2022 and reached an all-time high of $62.36 on 31 March, following the news that Binance would begin accepting WAVES as collateral on its loan platform. However, a strong correction followed and towards the end of April, the token dropped to around $13.

Controversy dogged the platform in the second quarter of 2022, and the founder suggested the reason for the falling value was short sellers. Commentators accused the developers of running a Ponzi scheme. To make things worse, in May, the crypto market crashed due to the collapse of Terra LUNA, striking both Waves and the whole crypto sector.

For the rest of the year, the prolonged bear market kept Waves price down. The coin ultimately slumped to close the year 2022 at $1.32, down nearly 98% from its previous peak in March.

Current Waves Price

At the time of writing, Waves coin is trading at $2.31 with a market cap of $229,782,990, ranking #116 amongst all cryptocurrencies by that metric. In the past 24 hours, the price of WAVES has increased by 11.28% with a trading volume of $82,097.
