What is Yield Guild Games?

Within the virtual land-based economy, players are rewarded with native tokens during in-game competitions, which allows them to vote and participate in decentralised autonomous organisation (DAO)-related activities.

The YGG play-to-earn crypto token can be used in any or all the following ways:

- staked for token rewards;
- staked for access to exclusive content; and/or
- used as a method of payment within the network.

YGG's protocol is automated by smart contracts, which are instructed by a governance voting consensus within the DAO. Users can play competitively within the metaverse and collect in-game rewards, as well as produce revenue through the rental or sale of YGG-owned NFT assets.

As such, the primary revenue of the DAO comes from leveraging YGG-owned NFT assets, either directly or indirectly through a rental programme where guild members utilise assets in exchange for a portion of the in-game rewards.

YGG players are called 'scholars' and they can stake YGG tokens in any number of vaults. Each vault represents the token rewards from one or all guild revenue sources. For instance, one of the vaults could be dedicated to revenue from the sales of YGG, while the other vault could be used to distribute revenue acquired from NFT rentals.

Rewards from the vaults are paid out to scholars, according to both the proportion of tokens staked by each guild member and the current revenue generated by the scholar assigned to the vault.
