What is Enjin?

The Enjin platform is an integrated product ecosystem designed to create, distribute, store, trade and even integrate token digital assets. Enjin adopters mainly focus on games and enterprise use cases. They use the platform to create digital assets supported by enj and use them creatively — from art NFT (unfungible token) to digital vouchers, to items that can be used in multiple different video games. An Enjin adopter is even using the platform to tokenize commercial real estate.

The cryptocurrency Enjin (enj) itself was created on the Ethereum blockchain and was born by raising $18.9 million through ICO at the end of 2017. However, its history can be traced back to 2009, when its game community platform was launched.

Enjin's community management tools help more than 20million minecraft users keep in touch and form a strong network of like-minded players. By adopting this user first approach and applying it to the blockchain field, they started to create the final multi in one token platform.

The Enjin cryptocurrency project was created as a complete ecosystem, providing its users with a set of powerful products, aiming to enable anyone to jump into the world of blockchain, regardless of their understanding of the working principle of blockchain.

The Founder of Enjin

Enjin is a growing project co founded by CEO Maxim blagov and CTO Witek Radomski. Enjin is a for-profit company, which started as a community game platform in 2009. The project launched ICO in 2017 and raised about $18.9 million in the process. Enjin was officially launched in 2018.

What Makes Enjin Different?

According to the co-founder Witek Radomski, the uniqueness of Enjin coin is that every token cast on the Enjin platform is directly supported by the platform's token enj. It essentially endows the items in the game with real-world liquidity, and then provides the possibility for cryptocurrency driven blockchain games and gamified real-world platforms.

In addition, Blagov said that the company is currently focusing on the adoption of new platforms. He imagines the future of tomorrow. Millions of game players use the digital project supported by Enjin coin and do not even know its existence.

The solid use case of Enjin, coupled with the inherent scarcity of enj tokens, has created a huge value proposition for the whole project. Kriptomat has used the Enjin platform to provide its users with a reward system - Dragon Knight. Using our exchange or any of our cooperative websites will win you a cryptocurrency called kripto. Then, it can be used to obtain various rewards, such as transaction discounts or collectibles, which can be owned and used in various games. Of course, it can also be freely traded as cryptocurrency.
